THE WEEKLY EXAMINER'S subscription lists are increasing amazingly.

To the Dallas Times: The Ross boom is all right and don't you forget it, either.

While the Dallas papers are cutting each other's throats, Waco papers are quietly stepping to the front rapidly.

This Fort Worth Mail is very happy in its fibbing at the Dallas papers. They are certainly making themselves very ridiculous.

We're not asking for "kind words" from the Temple Times, and are not squealing much. We are abundantly able to take care of ourselves without help.

The Laredo Times says it costs nothing to interview Senator Maxey. That's so, but it will cost no end of hard kicks to beat him for the United States senate.

These dirty mess in the great papers represented by the trials in Emporia, Kansas, and Boston, is drawing to a close. These have been the most prurient reports which have been in the papers for years, and all cleanly people will rejoice when they are over.

HENRY HYDER TAYLOR'S San Antonio Pygmy is the latest addition to the journalism of Texas. The plan of the publication is original and it is of course sprightly and interesting. San Antonio is second only to Dallas in the number of its papers, but it must be confessed they are of a far higher grade than those of the latter.

"Flow down, cold Rivulet," is Cran's favorite in public—Laredo Times.

The simple truth is "Old Cran" has always been a little fond of the little rivulet which flows from the still.

The only evidence of reform we see in the fellow is his own low protestations. They do not go for much on Bridge street, Waco. "Cran" is a devil of a Christian Temperance union in and of himself. The little shekels are all he cares about. When he throws down fifty on a circus ad, he expects to gather up one hundred from the faithful cold-rivulet men who are blind enough to follow him.

Texas Cattle.

In view of the near approach of the national cattlemen's convention, it would seem to us to be the thing for Texas cattlemen to organize, so as to present a firm front to that body to the end that the damaging discriminations against Texas cattle might be softened if not entirely done away with. All danger of the disease known as the Texas fever, has passed away, as in winter, it promptly disappears. But yet, notwithstanding all this, the governor of New Mexico stubbornly refuses to raise his quarantine, and thus are our cattlemen unable to fill the contracts for both October and November deliveries. These are evils which are very grievous and oppressive to one of the chief industries of the state. It seems to us that the Texas cattlemen, if they would act in concert and with entire unanimity, could raise such a din at the coming convention, that that body would take immediate action, and congress give us the very badly needed legislation this winter on this subject.

Unless the northwestern herds are positively endangered by Texas cattle at this season of the year, all obstacles to their movements ought to be removed promptly. It is neither justice or sound policy to permit the cattle of Texas to be thus interdicted and forbidden the markets. The poor of Chicago, St. Louis, New York and even far away Boston, are all interested in this matter and, as it is inter-state in its range and sweep, congress should honestly seek for and fearlessly apply the proper remedy. It would seem to us that a cattle commission, consisting of some of the best known cattle operators of the west and a few scientific veterinary surgeons, should be appointed, and to this body be referred all the questions growing out of the conflicting interests and views of the men engaged in the business.

Of course this is a matter in which Texas has a vast interest. More in fact than any other state, because the policy of exclusion, as it now prevails, falls more heavily upon her than any other. It simply amounts to the murder, or at least the serious crippling of her cattle operations. So vast an interest, one amounting to many millions per annum ought to call out every latent energy of the people, but more especially of the men engaged directly in the cattle business.

It would seem to us that the thing to do would be to enlist, as far as practical, the delegates to the national convention in the matter. To excite in them a spirit of fairness. We do not want to force diseased cattle upon any market or upon any grazing ground. We simply want the privilege of entering these fields when the season is such as to render it safe for our cattle to come to them. The foolish terror of the governor of New Mexico in keeping up his quarantine now, after all danger is over, is mischievous in this—that it wantonly injures us and can do New Mexican stockmen not the slightest shadow of good. A broad-viewed, square and sound policy on the part of the stockmen of Texas, at the coming national convention, will so operate as to induce a decided "let up" in the virulence of the northwestern men and especially on the part of his excellency, the governor of New Mexico.

THE people voted for a complete change in the executive force of the government, not simply for Mr. Cleveland alone. They are disappointed. The truest civil-service reform is that which selects able, honest and reputable democrats to succeed republicans who have had a long enough turn at the wheel.

EDMONDSON, of the Lagrange Journal is rather more savage than the balance of the lot. He kills both Ross and Swain off at one blow. It is a sort of labor saving arrangement, you see.

THE News is still putting up that little fight at the state administration. It don't hurt much after you get used to it, and Ireland knows all about the thing by this time.

We may have to support Grover Cleveland for president another time but that will prove a dish of crow about which there will be little relish. At least that is the way it looks now.

THE Colorado Clipper announces the conversion of Judge J. R. Fleming, who has joined the Methodist church. In or out of the church, Judge Fleming is an excellent man.

THE callow young editors of Texas who have so completely killed and buried Ross, will be astonished at the vigor the corpse will display about convention time next year.

THERE are truly a good many mosquitos in San Antonio, and some of them harbor about the newspaper offices. The Times is eminently correct in this.

TEXAS wants real settlers, self-supporting settlers, not paupers. Such a proposition as this ought to be clear enough without a great deal of argument.

THE dengue gets the manhood out of a man about as soon and effectually as anything you can strike these days. Ugh, but it is a miserable disease.

THERE have been a heap worse men in the republican administration of Texas than Jack Evans. Some of them are still in office, too.

W. A. FILLIS is spoken of for the senate, in the Comanche district. He'll make a good one, and is a sprightly fellow.

THE Statesman is trying the supplement dodge. It is a good one, when you have anything to put into it.

CLEVELAND should reflect that he was not elected especially to destroy the public confidence in democracy.

THE editor of the EXAMINER (dengue) is under obligations to Mr. Wilson for a sadly needed tonic.

MR. WICKENS, of the Globe-Democrat, paid the EXAMINER a very acceptable visit yesterday.

IT is getting so now bank failures are to be investigated in Texas. We are going ahead.

JOHN LUNSFORD is making a good paper of the Corsicana Courier. Success to him.

EVERY now and then Mrs. Lydia Pinkham's benevolent pills bobs up in the papers.

WACO keeps up her prestige as the leading interior cotton market of Texas.

CIDER and apples are the remedies for dengue.

PAINTED WITH A HAIR.

The Marvellous Art Work That Dalton, an English Microscopist, was Able to do.

From the New York Sun.

A microscopic fancier of this city, who does not ride his hobby out of his home, as I would not for the world allow himself to be interviewed upon his pet subject for a newspaper, entertained the other evening at his house a company of persons, among whom was a reporter of the Sun. He walked to a table standing in the center of the room, upon which was his favorite microscope.

"I have several little things to tell you that are not known except by microscopists. Here is a slip of glass, for instance," he continued, as he picked up a narrow glass slide, "which contains the representation of a beautiful bouquet of flowers. The representation, when looked at with the naked eye can scarcely be seen at all. It simply looks like a small spot. But when you look at it through the instrument, contains, as you can discover, eighty-two distinct flowers of various shades and colors, and each as perfect as it would be possible for an artist to reproduce it on canvas. The entire bouquet, including all the flowers, leaves, etc., was made from the scales and hair of Brazilian butterflies. The dust from the wings of the butterfly was picked up and placed in position by Henry Dalton, of London, who is now dead. Dalton, with the aid of a microscope, picked up one particle of the dust at a time on a slip of glass, and adjusted it to the slide in such a manner that when his task was finished the bouquet assumed its present beautiful and perfect form.

"Although Dalton was, as you may have heard, an Englishman, he excelled most of his imitators in his peculiar line of art. Among microscopists his works are prized as highly as the works of the great masters in painting are valued by artists who work on canvas. A painter who can paint a complete scene on a surface as small as a sleeve-button is considered a skillful artist. Dalton used a single hair for a brush, and dealt with particles of matter scarcely visible to the naked eye, which he placed in their respective positions, with the aid of his microscope, with such accuracy that he finally produced his representations, which are so correct in every detail that artists who have examined them critically have been almost overcome with astonishment. This is what I call one of the wonderful achievements of the century.

"He was a fast worker, and, by laboring almost incessantly, he could finish it, I think, in the course of a week or ten days. The Dalton slides are very valuable in America. There are not more than fifty Dalton slides in this country, and they are scarcely purchased for love or money. In fact, as I said before, they are as highly prized by microscopists throughout the world as a rare painting by a celebrated master is prized. I have also one or two other slides executed by artists not so noted as Dalton. Gray's Elegy, containing thirty-two verses, has been photographed by the aid of a microscope on a slide within a space of one-tenth of an inch square, and is perfectly legible when read through a powerful instrument."

The company looked through the instrument and saw, among other objects, the tongue of a fly, the too-little of a goat, the digestive apparatus of a flea, the eyebrow of an insect too small to be detected with the naked eye, the circulation of the blood in a mosquito's jugular vein, an abacus on the back of a fly's neck, a fracture in an ant's collar-bone, and a thousand and other extraordinary sights.

WANTED TO SELL HER BODY.

How a Woman, With Marrying Children, Obtains Money.

New York, October 26.—Professor James Walsh stood in the dissecting-room of the New York University Medical College when a messenger arrived and announced that a lady wished to see him. The professor at once ordered that she be admitted. As this is a most unusual request on the part of a lady, and as the professor did not know of any female acquaintances who would be particularly anxious to see him in the dissecting-room, his curiosity was aroused to learn the cause of this lady's visit.

After the lapse of half a minute or so a tall, angular woman, past middle life, with a Teutonic cast of countenance and an unmistakable accent, made her appearance.

"You are the superintendent here?" she asked, and without waiting for an answer added, "I have been at home with you, and I am now here to see you. I wish to dispose of my body, and I am told you buy such things here." This was at once in the line of the professor's business, and he eagerly caught at the opportunity.

"Yes, we buy bodies here," he said, "but they must be of the right kind—no mutilation, no infection; nothing of that sort, you know."

"Oh," she replied, "this body is all right, and I will be responsible for it. You see my children are hungry, and it will not do to starve while one can get bread. I do hate to see them dying before my very eyes while I am able to give them no help."

"Perhaps, then, it is this body of one of your children you are going to sell?" asked Professor Walsh.

"In that case it would be of no use to us, as we require adults alone."

"On that score you may rest easy. It is not my children's body, but my own. For I can get bread now no other way, and you can have it as soon as I receive the money, for I can die easy when I know the little ones have had something to eat."

The professor looked up into the face of the distracted mother and at a glance saw that picture of earnestness and truth forcibly depicted thereon that went down into the heart of the man. He drew a bill from his pocket, a $5 bill, and placed it in the hands of the poor demoralized creature. She overheard the donor with her thanks.

EPITHELIOMA!

OR SKIN CANCER.

For seven years I suffered with a cancer on my face. All the usual remedies were applied to alleviate the pain, but the cancer continued to grow, finally extending into my nose, from which came yellowish discharge very offensive to family and friends. The case also damaged and annoyed me a great deal. About eight months ago I was in Atlanta, Ga., and saw a man who was a specialist in the treatment of skin diseases. He recommended the use of Swift's Eczema Cure. I bought a bottle and began its use. The influence of the medicine on my face was so marked that I was able to go out again. I was so much relieved that I bought another bottle and continued its use. The cancer was completely cured, and I have been free from it ever since. I am now a healthy man, and I can say that Swift's Eczema Cure is the best remedy for skin cancer that I have ever used. I have since recommended it to many of my friends, and they have all been cured. I have since recommended it to many of my friends, and they have all been cured. I have since recommended it to many of my friends, and they have all been cured.
